Description

A large and very impressive antique oil painting by the respected known Venetian lady artist Calzolari, who was trained under the supervision of her grandfather, as well as attending the fine arts school of Venice, where her artist family also taught and lectured. She was an extremely successful and talented Venetian artist, with many of her works apparently now in European museums. Her brother and father, who were also successful Venetian artists, tended to follow their interests in the style of old Flemish masters and although Calzolari was a very capable artist also in following the Flemish old master styles, she was also very successful in executing commissions for wealthy patrons looking for their own Canaletto's and Italian renaissance old masters etc. This beautiful Flemish influenced old master antique oil painting is quite large and is complimented by an elegant and handsome frame.
