Description

A distinguished example of early 19th-century campaign craftsmanship, this Georgian rosewood box circa 1820 presents beautifully with its rich, dark patina and striking brass-bound accents. Designed for durability and elegance, the brass corner strapping and central escutcheon not only enhance its visual appeal but also reflect its original purpose as a travelling officer's or gentleman's companion piece. The lid opens to reveal an inviting interior lined in vibrant green lining with a pleated satin lid panel—an attractive survival of period workmanship. Inside sits a well-fitting, lift-out tray, offering practical tiered storage and allowing the box to function as both a document and personal effects chest. Condition: No key and the brass escutcheon to the front isn't inlaid to perfection. Materials: Rosewood and brass Age: c.1820 Size: Length: 27.5cm Width: 20.5cm Height: 11cm Reference Number: 7223b
