Description

A Flight, Barr and Barr Worcester Porcelain 'Warwick' vase, c.1815-20. Finely painted by Thomas Lowe, of classic campana form with double entwined and gilded handles, raised on a square foot, the rim with egg and dart moulding, painted on both sides with a figural panel, one depicting the 'Maid of Orleans', the other 'Ferdinand and Miranda', the deep blue ground with very intricate gold tracery and anthemion borders. Impressed crowned FBB mark and full script mark including Coventry St address, the panels titled in similar script. The panels are close to the hand of Thomas Baxter. After his departure, Baxter wrote to a friend mentioning that the figure painting at Flights 'is now done by a pupil of mine named Lowe'. Thomas Lowe had been a pupil at Baxter's china painting school in Worcester and, according to Solomon Cole, Lowe went on to 'higher branches of their art afterwards'. 'The Maid of Orléans' is another name for Joan of Arc, a national heroine of France who led the French army to victory during the Hundred Years' War. She was given this title after lifting the English siege of Orléans in 1429. The panel titled "The Maid of Orléans" shows Joan of Arc where she ...
