Description

A beautiful early 20th-century tilt-top pedestal table, crafted in solid mahogany and raised on a classic turned column with three elegant splayed legs. Each leg terminates in ornate brass lion-paw castors, a highly desirable detail often found on quality Edwardian furniture. The circular top shows an attractive grain and warm colour, offering a generous surface suitable for use as a centre table, occasional table, lamp table, or decorative statement piece. The tilt-top mechanism locks securely, allowing the table to be displayed upright when not in use — a traditional feature that adds both charm and practicality. A fine, well-proportioned piece with lovely character, perfect for period interiors, bay windows, hallways, or a Victorian/Edwardian-style sitting room. Very good antique condition. The frame is sturdy and stable; castors run well. The top shows light age-related wear consistent with use, but is clean and presentable. Tilt mechanism fully working. Ready to place and enjoy.
