Description

This is an exquisite antique French Napoleon III Bacarrat ormolu and glass Cave a Liqueur, or tantalus, circa 1860 in date. The Cave a Liqueur features an ormolu case with glass panels and an 'up and over' lid enclosing a gilt bronze frame containing sixteen small glasses and four decanters with stoppers, the whole raised on finely cast ormolu paw feet. One decanter with a Bacarrat label to the underside. The glasses and decanters are beautifully engraved with geometric decoration. It is an absolutely superb set which is sure to attract a lot of attention. As seen in the Ridley Scott historical film "Napoleon". Condition: In really excellent condition with no damage, please see photos for confirmation. Dimensions in cm: Height 29 cm x Width 37 cm x Depth 30 cm Dimensions in inches: Height 11 inches x Width 1 foot, 3 inches x Depth 1 foot Bacarrat In 1764 King Louis XV of France gave permission to found a glassworks in the town of Baccarat in the Lorraine region in eastern France to Prince Bishop Cardinal Louis-Joseph de Laval-Montmorency (1710-1802). Production consisted of window panes, mirrors and stemware until 1816 when the first crystal oven went into operation.
