Description

A good example of an 18th Century Georgian Sterling Silver meat skewer. It has a ring handle with a decorative shell shaped collar below and an engraved eagle crest. The skewer is good quality and made from a heavy gauge silver, weighing approximately 129g. It is clearly hallmarked for London, 1764, and the maker J.J (possibly James Jones). It is in good condition with a clear hallmark and there are no major damages. There are some faint surface scratches and a few light marks but nothing detrimental and it displays beautifully. It has been gently cleaned and polished and is ready for use. Approximate Measurements : Length : 14 1/4" / 36cm Width : 1" / 2.5cm The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions just ask.
