Description

A beautiful early 20th-century demi-lune console table, executed in refined Georgian and Louis XVI Revival taste, featuring a richly veined rouge marble top above an elegant white-painted frieze highlighted with finely hand-applied gilt decoration. The semi-circular marble top is framed by a delicate gilt-edged moulding and displays attractive natural veining, providing a luxurious contrast against the painted and gilded base. The frieze is adorned with scrolling foliate motifs, executed in classical relief and finished with warm gold highlights. The table stands on four slender, fluted tapering legs, each enriched with gilded capitals and detailing, terminating in neatly finished feet. The proportions are well-balanced and elegant, making the piece ideal for refined period interiors. Decorative, versatile, and highly appealing, this console table works beautifully in hallways, reception rooms, dining rooms, or positioned behind a sofa as a statement accent piece. Key Features Elegant demi-lune (half-moon) console table White painted finish with hand-applied gilt decoration Rouge marble top with attractive natural veining Gilt-edged moulded top and decorative frie...
