Description

A very attractive Coalport salmon-pink-ground porcelain waste bowl. c.1815. Painted in Bristol by Thomas Pardoe. The exterior with gilt marbled decoration, the interior painted with shells and coral within a circular gilt band and below a gilt husk border. Diameter: 15.6 cm diameter Height: 7 cm Thomas Pardoe established his own decorating business in Swansea c.1809 and by 1812, his residence and shop were at 28 Bath Street, Bristol. Pardoe decorated bought-in creamware and Coalport porcelain. The porcelain has a small area of pitting to the bowl interior, and a dirt filled chip to the footrim. Examination under UV reveals evidence of professional restoration, around the lower part of the exterior and to the interior, and possibly also to the foot rim, but this is very well executed and not discernible to the naked eye. The decoration of the bowl is largely intact, the centre has some light scratching, and some of the gilding to the rim has been rubbed.
