Description

A top-quality Georgian-style walnut kneehole desk or dressing table. The piece is finely veneered in richly figured walnut, displaying a warm, well-matched colour throughout, with careful attention paid to detail and finish. The arrangement comprises a central kneehole fitted with a cupboard, flanked by banks of drawers on either side, providing generous and practical storage. The drawers are well constructed, run smoothly, and are fitted with decorative brass handles. The shaped apron and bracket feet reflect classic Georgian design, lending the piece an elegant and timeless presence. Versatile in use, this piece works equally well as a writing desk, dressing table or hall desk, making it an ideal choice for both traditional and more relaxed interiors. A well-made and attractive example that offers the look and feel of Georgian furniture with everyday usability. circa 1930
