Description

A fine late 19th century mahogany Shoolbred folding Pembroke table of elegant butterfly form, the shaped top opening to reveal a well-figured surface with delicate satinwood banding and a central oval inlaid motif. Fitted with a single frieze drawer and raised on slender square tapering legs, each terminating in original brass caps and castors. The refined proportions and quality of the inlay are characteristic of Shoolbred production of the period, combining practicality with understated decorative appeal. The table folds neatly when not in use and opens smoothly, making it both versatile and attractive. In good condition throughout, with a pleasing colour and patina.
