Description

A handsome antique Victorian oak writing bureau featuring a classic drop-front writing surface, internal pigeonholes and drawers, and four spacious lower drawers. The warm oak tone and well-proportioned form give this piece a timeless, practical elegance typical of 19th century British furniture. The fall-front opens smoothly to reveal a functional writing area with multiple compartments, ideal for correspondence, paperwork or a laptop. Below, the drawers offer generous storage and retain their original brass handles, adding to the bureau's authentic character. A versatile piece that works equally well as a traditional writing desk, home office bureau, or statement storage piece in a living room or hallway. Very good antique condition. Structurally sound and solid. Visible signs of age and use are present as shown in the photographs, which enhance the character of the piece. Key missing, however this does not affect functionality the bureau opens, closes and is fully usable.
