Description

Although 19th century suzanis from Uzbekistan were made commercially, many of the best examples were made as dowry gifts. This beautiful piece may be one of those. Exceptionally well-crafted with very fine embroidery and silk quality, it has survived in excellent original condition and was clearly cherished through the generations. Woven in six panels on a cotton background, the small-scale floral field design, is framed by borders with repeating large scale flowers, fan-like ornaments and meandering leaves. It is a beautifully crafted design, elegant and luxuriant. The colouring is exquisite with liberal use of fuchsia, a lovely burnt orange, greens for the leaves, with touches of pink and light blue. Recently cleaned and relined, it is an outstanding work which is both highly decorative and collectible.
