Description

An attractive pair of Worcester porcelain geranium moulded butterboats. c1758-60 They are painted with the Mansfield pattern. Workman's marks to the base The pair are in very good condition with no cracks or restoration. Geranium moulded butterboats are highly collectible antique porcelain serving dishes, characterized by their exterior moulded to look like overlapping geranium leaves, often featuring a stalk handle and painted in underglaze blue. They were functional, shaped like small boats, and valued for their intricate leaf molding and historical patterns. A delightful pair of dishes
