Description

A charming late 19th-century mahogany pedestal table, featuring a well-proportioned oval top and an elegant turned central column raised on a shaped tripod base. The table retains its original brass castors, a lovely period detail that adds both character and practicality. The rich mahogany surface displays a warm, attractive grain, while the base is finely carved with classic Victorian curves and scroll feet. The table stands firmly and evenly, making it suitable for everyday use as well as decorative display. Very good antique condition. Structurally sound and stable throughout. There are minor age-related marks, surface wear and small imperfections, consistent with age and use, clearly visible in the photographs. These add to the table's authentic antique character. Original castors are present and in working order.
