Description

These small, late-Victorian cast iron urns are quintessential examples of late 19th-century "Grand Tour" style—miniaturized versions of the massive classical urns found in the gardens of French estates and chateaus. At 24.5cm in height, they are classified as "tabletop" or "parapet" urns. Their size makes them exceptionally versatile, as they were often used to flank a doorway, sit atop a stone wall, or serve as indoor decorative pieces for a sideboard or library.
