Description

While it dates to roughly 1930, the style of this beautiful commode is a direct homage to the Louis XVI (Neoclassical) period of the late 18th century. The "trompe l'oeil" (trick of the eye) drawer configuration—where three long drawers are disguised as six smaller ones—is a classic French cabinet making technique. It provides the practical storage of a wide commode while maintaining the delicate, symmetrical proportions required by Neoclassical aesthetics. This is achieved using vertical brass "reeds" in the center of the drawer fronts making the commode appear elegant and architectural. It is a quality piece, made of mahogany, with a lovely thick marble top and beautiful gilded brass fittings. All three locks are working with their keys. 130cm long x 54cm (deep to roundel) x 86cm high
