Description

A decorative pair of patinated brass three-branch wall sconces, dating from around circa 1900. Each sconce features a central upright stem with three scrolling arms, terminating in shaped candle nozzles above decorative drip pans with pierced detailing. The brass has developed an attractive, even aged patina, enhancing the depth and character of the surface. The sconces retain crisp detailing throughout and display pleasing symmetry when mounted as a pair. They have been professionally rewired for electricity and are ready for installation, while retaining their traditional candle-style appearance. A versatile and elegant pair, well suited to hallways, living spaces, or either side of a chimney breast, combining period character with practical modern use.
