Description

A charming antique chequer-top table, beautifully proportioned and richly figured, dating to the mid-19th century. The rectangular top is inlaid with a chequerboard playing surface, framed by a contrasting border that showcases the natural variation and warmth of the timber. The surface has developed a pleasing, time-worn patina consistent with age, adding depth and character without detracting from its usability. Raised on elegant shaped cabriole legs, the table has a graceful stance and lightness of form. A small central drawer beneath the top provides practical storage. Presented in very good antique condition, with only minor signs of age and use, this table is structurally sound and ready for use. Key Details: Type: Chequer-top / games table Period: Mid-19th century Top: Inlaid chequerboard playing surface Features: Central drawer Condition: Very good antique condition with attractive patina Equally suited as a small games table, occasional table, or decorative accent piece, this versatile antique works beautifully in both traditional and contemporary interiors.
