Description

A handsome antique mahogany side table, dating to the 19th century, featuring a finely turned barley twist column and a well-proportioned circular top. The solid mahogany top has a gently moulded edge and displays a rich, deep patina developed over years of careful use. It is supported by a striking central barley twist stem, raised on a tripod base with shaped cabriole legs and pad feet, giving the table both stability and elegant presence. Presented in good antique condition, the table is structurally sound, with only light surface marks and wear consistent with age, enhancing its authentic character. Key Details: Period: Mid-late 19th century Material: Solid mahogany Top: Circular, moulded edge Base: Central barley twist column on tripod legs Condition: Very good antique condition with attractive patina Perfect as a lamp table, wine table, or occasional table, this piece works beautifully in both traditional interiors and more contemporary settings where a touch of period charm is desired.
