Description

Edwardian Inlaid Mahogany Carlton House Desk by Maple & Co This exceptional Edwardian inlaid mahogany Carlton House desk by Maple & Co is a refined example of early 20th-century English craftsmanship, combining elegant proportions with practical design. Constructed from beautifully figured mahogany and enhanced with delicate inlay, the desk features a classic horseshoe-shaped superstructure rising above a rich red leather writing surface. The arrangement of graduated drawers and pigeonholes provides generous storage while maintaining a balanced, symmetrical appearance. Raised on tapering square legs terminating in brass caps and castors, the desk is designed to stand freely within a room, making it ideal as a centrepiece for a study, library, or executive office. Maple & Co's renowned quality is evident throughout, from the precision of the joinery to the finely cast brass handles.

History of the Carlton House Desk The Carlton House desk takes its name from Carlton House in London, once the residence of the Prince of Wales (later George IV). The form emerged in the late 18th century and became especially popular during the Georgian...
