Description

A magnificent late 19th-century antique mahogany wardrobe, richly decorated with exceptional marquetry inlay panels depicting classical urns, scrolling foliage, and foliate swags. The wardrobe features a striking central mirrored door, flanked by two beautifully inlaid panel doors, all framed within a substantial moulded cornice. The marquetry is executed with great precision, using contrasting woods to create depth, symmetry, and visual richness throughout the façade. Internally, the wardrobe offers generous hanging space to either side, with two lower drawers providing additional storage. The base is finished with a solid plinth, grounding the piece with a strong and elegant presence. Grand in scale and highly decorative, this wardrobe is ideally suited to period homes, country houses, boutique hotels, or refined interior schemes seeking a statement storage piece with real character. Condition Presented in very good antique condition, with light age-related wear consistent with age. The marquetry remains crisp and well-defined, the structure is solid throughout, and the interior is clean and functional. Dimensions height 225cm x width 184cm x depth 56cm
