Description

A genuine Georgian oak wall-mounted corner cupboard, dating to the late 18th / early 19th century. Designed to be fixed into a corner and kept off the floor, making it an ideal space-saving storage piece for period and modern homes alike. The cupboard features a panelled single door with a decorative shell inlay to the centre, framed by well-executed mouldings. Internally, there are shaped fixed corner shelves, providing practical storage for crockery, decorative items or hallway essentials. Crafted from solid oak, the timber has mellowed beautifully over time, showing a rich colour and grain that only comes with genuine age. A strong, honest example of Georgian furniture that works particularly well in a hallway, kitchen, dining room or study. Condition Structurally solid and in good usable condition. Expected age-related wear, surface marks and knocks consistent with a genuine Georgian piece, all in keeping with its age and character. Door opens and closes well. Approximate Dimensions • Width (front): 80 cm • Depth: 45.5 cm • Side return length: 54.5 cm • Height: 102 cm Please be aware that this item does show signs of use, which is to be expected consi...
