Description

A lovely and very rare example of mid 19th Century flatware in the scarce trailing vine pattern. These wonderful spoons are condiment ladles, in double struck pattern (front and back) and with gilded bowls. To the reverse of the shanks is a small engraved armorial. These charming ladles were used at the table for serving condiments, primarily salt and pepper but have a number of alternative uses. Desirable collector's items, with a practical use.
