Description

A beautifully graceful pair of mid-century French diamond and pearl stud earrings, crafted in solid 18ct white gold and dating to the 1960s. Elegant in both form and proportion, each earring is set with a luminous cultured pearl, beneath which a gently curving row of sparkling diamonds adds a subtle note of brilliance. The pearls display a refined soft silver tone with delicate pink undertones and a gentle, even lustre, perfectly complemented by the crisp sparkle of the diamonds. Their modest size allows them to sit neatly and comfortably on the ear, making them ideal for everyday elegance while remaining suitably refined for evening wear. These are high quality earrings. The reverse of each earring is clearly marked AU 750 for 18ct gold, together with the maker's initials BTF. The posts are also marked 750. The butterfly backs are later replacements, marked 925. Presented in excellent condition and offered in the box illustrated, these charming earrings would make a delightful and timeless gift.
