Description

An Art Deco oak coffee table of clean, architectural form, dating to the 1930s, and very much in the manner of Heal & Son. The table features a well-proportioned circular solid oak top, raised on four square-section legs with subtle linear incised detailing, united by a lower circular undertier that provides both visual balance and practical storage. The restrained decoration and emphasis on proportion and craftsmanship are hallmarks of British Art Deco design, where utility and elegance were carefully combined. The oak displays an attractive, warm tone with a pleasing, even patina, consistent with age. The overall design is understated yet confident, making it a highly versatile piece that works equally well in both period and contemporary interiors. While no maker's mark is present, the table is closely comparable to documented Heal's designs of the period, both in construction and aesthetic, and would sit comfortably alongside known examples.
