Description

This is a substantial, deeply proportioned fireplace fender formed in a long rectangular run with a pronounced return at each end, creating a generous three-sided surround that is ideal for framing a wide hearth and a large feature fireplace. The overall design has a strong architectural presence, with a broad, stepped plinth base supporting an open balustrade gallery that runs along the front and continues around both sides. The balustrade is made up of evenly spaced turned spindle uprights, each with a rounded, tapered profile, giving it a refined, classical look while still feeling extremely robust and purposeful. At each corner the fender is finished with a taller square pedestal block, rising above the rail and topped with an elegant spherical finial. These corner posts act as visual anchors, giving the piece a very balanced, symmetrical appearance and making the fender feel deliberately "built" rather than merely assembled. Between the corner posts, the upper rail is straight and clean-lined, with the spindles set neatly beneath it, and the lower section is more solid and weighty thanks to the substantial base moulding. This stepped base not only adds decorative ...
