Description

Late 17th Century Oak Coffin – Carved Panels & Period Patina completely original. This was possibly a marriage chest with the date inscribed at a later date. A superb late 17th century oak coffin, steeped in character and craftsmanship. The front panel is intricately carved with symmetrical motifs and foliate designs, reflecting the decorative vernacular of the period. The deep, rich tone of the oak has mellowed beautifully over centuries, with a surface patina that speaks to its age and authenticity. Constructed with traditional pegged joints and iron side handles, this coffin was built for both durability and status—likely serving as secure storage for linens, valuables, or documents in a well-appointed household. The top shows honest wear, adding to its rustic charm and historical integrity. Ideal for collectors, stylists, or interior designers seeking a genuine 17th-century statement piece. Equally suited to hallways, bedrooms, or as a feature in a curated retail or hospitality setting. Of substantial proportions. Nationwide delivery available.
