Description

A substantial antique oak refectory table, in Elizabethan style, the thick five plank top with cleated ends and raised on substantial blind fret-carved end supports joined by a central stretcher. The table appears to be 19th century but the carved end supports are possibly older elements. It is extremely heavy and a good size which comfortably seats eight. The top is of very good colour and has been very well cared for, there is gap shrinkage between two of the planks. 76cm high (including 4cm thick top), 198cm long, 83cm deep.
