Description

A refined 19th-century French bookcase crafted in richly figured flame mahogany, showcasing the dramatic grain patterns so prized in the period. The upper section features glazed doors opening to adjustable shelves, ideal for displaying books, ceramics, or objets d'art. Below, a bank of drawers provides generous enclosed storage, each fitted with brass escutcheon and retaining a working lock and key. Architectural side columns, crisp mouldings, and the warm lustre of the French-polished finish highlight the cabinetmaker's skill. The proportions are elegant yet practical, making this a versatile statement piece for a study, library, or drawing room. A superb example of 19th-century French craftsmanship, combining utility with timeless decorative appeal.
