Description

This is a small antique clerk's suitcase. An English, leather attaché case, dating to the late Victorian period, circa 1900. Delightful example with pleasing proportion and superb leather craft Presents a desirable aged patina, lightly time-worn with careful use Quality English leather tanned to a rich caramel hue and carefully stitched Dressed with brass rotating latch clasps to secure the contents — key absent Lid replete with a stencilled monogram with the initials J.P. Striking interior appointment sets it apart from other examples Lid interior hosts a gilt tooled and embossed lining with geometric pattern work Diamond motif pattern accentuates the lower half with small gilt star detail This is a superb antique clerk's case, being eminently usefaul in the modern day as it was in period. A treat for revival festivals, or as an accoutrement on a city commute. Delivered ready to enjoy.
