Description

An antique 20th century country farmhouse oak gateleg table, of oval form, raised on turned legs with a stretchered base. The table includes a single drawer set into the frieze, fitted with a brass handle. The drawer runs smoothly, with visible wear to the right-hand side drawer panel, as shown in the photographs. The table shows honest age-related wear throughout, including wear to the stretcher supports and leg joints, reflecting its long history of use and adding to its authentic farmhouse character. A highly practical and versatile piece, designed to adapt to different settings. It can sit neatly against a wall when not in use, be placed centrally within a room, or fully opened to form an oval dining table, ideal for special occasions. When fully extended, it comfortably serves as a family dining table, while retaining its traditional country appeal.
