Description

An antique Victorian golden oak library table / partners desk with a red leather writing surface finished with gold embossed edging. The table stands on distinctive turned bobbin legs and is fitted with six drawers, arranged as three drawers to each side, allowing it to function as a true partners desk with usable storage from both sides. The generous leather-topped surface provides a large working area, making the table suitable as a shared workspace, writing desk, or centre table within a study, library, or creative setting. The warm tone of the golden oak and the turned legs give the piece strong character while remaining practical.
