Description

This is a beautiful 19th century Indian silver Bidri ware vase in excellent condition dating from around 1900. Bidri ware is a 14th century, historically rich Indian metal handicraft originating from Bidar in Karnataka. It features stunning silver or brass inlay work against a uniquely blackened zinc and copper alloy surface. This intricate art involves molding, engraving, and oxidizing, creating decorative items like vases, boxes, and jewellery. Developed during the Bahmani Sultans' rule in the 14th century, it is named after the city of Bidar. The distinctive black, matte coating is achieved using a special soil from the Bidar fort, which is mixed with ammonium chloride. This is a particularly stylish vase with a bold, crisp design and a very attractive shape. The vase measures 25 cms high by 13 cms in diameter. UK insured delivery is £12
