Description

A distinguished mahogany bergère chair, exemplifying fine period craftsmanship and timeless design. Constructed from solid mahogany, the frame displays a deep, well-patinated surface, with clean architectural lines and finely turned legs terminating in brass castors—a characteristic feature of the period. The chair retains its classic bergère form, with a comfortably padded seat enclosed by cane-panelled sides and back. The hand-woven cane panels are elegantly shaped to follow the gentle curves of the frame, providing both strength and visual lightness. The seat is upholstered in a green and neutral plaid fabric that complements the warmth of the mahogany while remaining sympathetic to the chair's historic character. Upholstered arm pads add an additional layer of comfort without detracting from the chair's refined proportions.
