Description

A good quality octagonal mahogany table dating from the early 19th Century. It stands on a baluster stem with four splayed legs with brass lions paw caps and castors. The octagonal top has a crossbanded edge with inlaid ebony banding and this banding continues on the legs. The table has one drawer with small brass handles and a brass escutcheon. Each of the eight sides of the table has a matching faux drawer complete with handles. The table has a lovely rich colour and patina and it is strong and sturdy. It is in good condition for its age and displays beautifully. There are some signs of age and use, a few small surface marks and knocks and there have been some veneer repairs around the drawer but nothing detrimental and overall it displays well.
