Description

An elegant set of six antique dining chairs, dating to the late Victorian period, crafted in solid wood with beautifully shaped open backs and gently curved top rails. The chairs stand on turned front legs with swept rear legs, giving them a light yet refined silhouette typical of the period. All six chairs retain their original upholstered seats, finished in a decorative floral fabric which remains clean, well-presented and comfortable. The frames are solid and stable, making the set perfectly suitable for everyday dining use as well as for a more formal setting. This is a well-matched set with consistent colour, form and proportions increasingly difficult to find in this condition. Seat height: 46 cm Very good antique condition. All frames are solid and stable. There are light, age related signs of wear to the wood consistent with normal use over time, adding to the chairs character. Upholstery is in very good order throughout.
