Description

This stunning pair of antique Black Forest wall plaques showcases hand-carved craftsmanship from the late 19th century. Each panel features a hunting trophy scene intricately carved in solid walnut. These finely carved, plaques represent, respectively, forest and plain hunting, with a deer and a pheasant for one, and mountain hunting, with a chamois and a snow partridge for the other. The game bags and rifles hang from the same nail as the game and are all mounted on ornate shield-shaped backings adorned with carved oak leaves and floral details. The level of detail and lifelike texture highlights the skill of the craftsman. They plaques have a wonderful rich patina which can only be gained through age. These impressive carvings display three-dimensional depth and realism, making them standout decorative pieces for any collector of Black Forest art, European antiques, or rustic hunting décor. They are mounted and ready to hang, offering a striking visual statement in a study, lodge, or grand hallway. Their rich patina and animated subject matter make them ideal as a decorative wall plaque, over-mantel piece, or back bar accent. The approximate MAXIMUM dimensions are ...
