Description

A George III country pembroke table having superb colour and patination. This little table has a single drawer with turned brass knobs, the little concave braces pull out via their wooden hinges and support the small leaves from the underside of the table. This is a super little table and is great for utilising space, as it can be used as a very small dining table, or the leaves can be put down and then the table becomes a side table. The table has some old warping to the top which adds to the character of the piece. There is also some old wood worm holes evident commensurate with age, overall it is in excellent condition and a lovely piece of furniture. Measurements Height 68cm x Length 52cm x depth 77cm Length when leaves are up 88.5cm
