Description

This gorgeous antique Victorian partners library table is crafted from beautiful flame mahogany and dates from Circa 1860. It features a striking inset green leather writing surface that has beautiful hand tooled and gilded impressed decoration. It is raised on four baluster legs that are elegantly turned and terminate in their original white porcelain and brass castors. It is a partners desk and has six frieze drawers, three on each side, all fitted with their original and decorative oval brass handles. They are solid mahogany lined, have hand cut dovetails and are perfectly sized for all the stationary you could possibly need, making this desk not just a symbol of refinement but a practical furnishing as well. Complete with working locks and six keys. It is finished on all sides so that it can stand freely in the middle of a room, making it extremely suitable for a large home or office. Provenance: High Buston Hall, Alnwick, Northumberland England See Photo Condition: In excellent condition having only been beautifully cleaned and wax polished in our workshops.
