Description

A Handsome Edwardian oak dresser, retaining its original base and plate rack, dating to circa 1910. The dresser is well proportioned and constructed in solid oak throughout, with a generous plate rack above two open shelves. Below, the base features a broad serving surface over a pair of panelled cupboard doors, raised on elegant turned legs united by stretchers, giving the piece a lighter and more refined presence than many farmhouse examples. With its warm colour, attractive grain and honest patina, this is a highly practical yet decorative piece, ideal for use in a kitchen, dining room or pantry setting. Period: Edwardian, c.1910 Material: Solid oak Condition: Good antique condition with age-related wear and surface marks consistent with use
