Description

A Large Chinese Qingbai-Glazed Conical Bowl with Incised Phoenix and Peony Motifs Republic Period, Early 20th Century The Form and Glaze This elegantly potted conical bowl measures 20.1 cm in diameter, featuring steep, flared walls that taper to a short, circular foot rim. It is finished in a luminous Qingbai (bluish-white) glaze of icy translucency. The glaze is thinnest at the rim and pools into the carved recesses of the decoration, creating a delicate contrast of pale aquamarine tones against the white porcelain body. The Decoration Exterior: The exterior is expertly incised with a fluid, continuous scene of a phoenix (Fenghuang) in flight. The mythical bird is depicted with a long, scrolling tail and outstretched wings, navigating through lush peony blossoms and scrolling foliage. Interior: The interior center is decorated in matching low-relief, featuring dense floral sprays that radiate toward the rim, emphasizing the bowl's wide, shallow proportions. Condition and Reverse The rim is unglazed, consistent with the traditional "inverted firing" technique used in Jingdezhen kilns. The base shows a characteristic orange-buff paste with visible kiln remnants an...
