Description

Victorian Gothic Revival Buffet Server Side Table. A stunning period server buffet. This is an imposing and exceptionally well-carved side table in solid English oak, dating to the late 19th century (C1900). A fine example of the Renaissance Gothic Revival style, it features deep-relief Flemish-style carvings across the back gallery and tabletop border. The hand-work is notably crisp, depicting scrolling acanthus leaves and the traditional "Green Man" masks at the corners and centre - an iconic motif of the period that gives the piece a real sense of character. The table is fitted with a single, wide frieze drawer featuring a bold, gadrooned front and its original brass pull-dropper handle. The construction is exactly what you want to see in quality Victorian cabinetmaking, with the drawer revealing fine hand-cut dovetail joints and solid Oak linings. It stands on four square slightly tapering legs with simple channelled detailing and scratch moulding which provides a sturdy base that balances the highly decorative top. We have thoroughly checked this piece over in our workshop, giving it a light clean and a traditional beeswax finish to nourish the timber. Crucially, we...
