Description

An original English Brown Bess flintlock musket of commercial / militia type, manufactured in Birmingham during the Napoleonic period and fitted with a lock signed "SARGANT & SON." The musket retains its original smoothbore steel barrel, of correct Brown Bess form with integral bayonet lug. The barrel shows honest age-related patination and bears Birmingham trade workman's and private view marks at the breech (letter punches and rosette), consistent with commercial manufacture. The muzzle is original and uncut. The lock is of military form, signed Sargent & Son, complete and in good working order, holding securely at half and full cock. All components are original and correctly fitted. The original walnut full stock shows expected service wear and patina, with internal oil and powder staining within the barrel channel consistent with long-term use; no worm. The musket retains its original brass furniture throughout, including butt plate, trigger guard, side plate, and ramrod pipes, all with matching colour and wear, confirming originality and absence of later replacement or marriage. This musket has never been Board of Ordnance issued, lacking crown, broad arrow, Tower, o...
