Description

Outstanding Diminutive Inlaid Ladies Writing Desk. An incredibly rare and wonderfully ornate piece. We are delighted to offer this truly fantastic and rare diminutive English Edwardian (late Victorian) Rosewood Ladies' writing desk, crafted circa 1890. A refined take on the Bonheur du Jour style, this piece is defined by its elegant proportions and exceptional craftsmanship. The Rosewood retains its original, sympathetically preserved French polished finish, which has aged to a beautiful, lightly faded tone that highlights the sophisticated grain. The desk is heavily ornamented with intricate marquetry and boxwood inlays, including a neo-classical foliate scroll design on the raised gallery and fine stringing following the contours of the slender, tapered legs. These legs are connected by a graceful 'H' stretcher and rest on their original polished brass castors on brown porcelain wheels with square ferrules. The sloped writing surface is inset with a full-grain green leather, decorated with ornate gold tooling and a central gilded rose medallion. Opening the slope reveals a spacious interior that we have carefully restored with a new green baize lining. Notably, th...
