Description

A beautifully atmospheric early 19th century oil on canvas depicting a tranquil harbour scene bathed in soft evening light. The composition centres on a two-masted vessel at anchor, its sails partially furled, with a smaller sailing ship beyond. In the foreground, a rowing boat carrying three figures drifts across calm reflective waters, while seabirds skim the surface. To the right, a rugged coastline with a lighthouse and ruined structure rises gently from the shoreline, adding both narrative interest and depth. The painting displays delicate tonal handling and a restrained maritime palette typical of late Georgian coastal painting. The glassy water, subtle sky gradation, and careful rendering of rigging and sailwork demonstrate a confident hand. Presented in a later dark frame. Unsigned. Circa 1800. A decorative and evocative maritime work, ideal for collectors of Georgian coastal scenes, traditional interiors, or nautical subjects. IMAGE SIZE 50x60cm
