Description

Antique 19th century fine quality captain's chair in mahogany, a very well-made and elegant piece of excellent craftsmanship. The chair features a beautifully upholstered seat and button-back backrest, most likely yellow leather, which provides both comfort and a striking visual contrast against the rich mahogany frame. Decorative studding runs neatly around the upholstery, enhancing its classic and refined appearance. The chair is supported by turned legs fitted with casters, allowing for ease of movement while also adding to its traditional character. The mahogany displays a gorgeous rich colour and attractive grain throughout, highlighting the quality of the timber and construction. Solid, sturdy, and presented in good condition, this is a highly desirable example of a 19th century captain's chair — practical, comfortable, and visually appealing. A perfect addition to any home, study, or office setting.
