Description

A fine quality Edwardian satinwood dressing table dating to circa 1910. The table is beautifully constructed in richly figured satinwood, displaying warm golden tones throughout. The upper section features a three-plate mirror back with central arched mirror flanked by hinged side mirrors, allowing adjustable viewing. The base is fitted with an arrangement of drawers, each decorated with finely executed parquetry and crossbanded inlay. Original brass handles remain in place. The shaped apron and delicately carved supports add refinement, while the whole stands on slender tapering legs united by an elegant serpentine stretcher. The craftsmanship is notably superior to standard Edwardian examples, with excellent timber selection and crisp detailing throughout. A refined and practical statement piece, ideal for a bedroom, dressing room or elegant guest suite. Dimensions H: 173cm | W: 112cm | D: 58cm
