This gorgeous Victorian antique partners library table is crafted from beautiful flame mahogany and dates from Circa 1860. It features a striking inset golden leather writing surface that has beautiful hand tooled and gilded impressed decoration. It is raised on four turned tapering legs that terminate in their original brass and brown porcelain castors. It is a Partners desk and unusually has a frieze drawer and a dummy drawer on each side. They are solid mahogany lined, have hand cut dovetails, their original knob handles and are perfectly sized for all the stationary you could possibly need, making this desk not just a symbol of refinement but a practical furnishing as well. It is finished on all sides so that it can stand freely in the middle of a room, making it extremely suitable for a large home or office.
