Description

William IV Circular Rosewood Dining Table with Bird's Eye Maple Block, c.1835

William IV Circular Rosewood Dining Table An exceptional William IV circular rosewood dining table, dating to circa 1835, showcasing the bold scale and refined craftsmanship characteristic of the period. The magnificent circular top is veneered in beautifully figured rosewood, displaying dramatic grain patterns and rich tonal variation that create a striking visual centrepiece. The table is raised on a substantial turned central column, standing on elegant carved scroll feet. Of particular note is the contrasting bird's eye maple block positioned beneath the top on the column – a premium timber detail rarely found on standard pieces. The use of bird's eye maple not only enhances the aesthetic contrast but is also a clear indicator of superior cabinetmaking quality and expense at the time of manufacture. The generous 134cm diameter comfortably accommodates six diners or more, making it ideal as a dining table or statement centre table. With its superb colour, outstanding figuring, and quality construction, this is a distinguished example of early 19thc. ro...
