Description

Robert Watson British, (1855-1920) Highland Cattle by a Stream Oil on canvas, signed & dated 1920 Image size: 19.25 inches x 29.25 inches Size including frame: 27 inches x 37 inches An atmospheric landscape painting of Highland Cattle at a mountain stream by Robert Watson. A group of Highland cattle and a calf are depicted watering at a stream as others graze on a grassy bank nearby. In the distance, birds can be seen taking flight over the water towards a dramatic mountainous landscape. This work was painted in the final year of the artist's life and shows his unwavering passion for the subject matter. Robert William Watson was born on 9 March, 1855 at 33 Marlborough Place, Brighton, Sussex the son of William John Watson (1807-1871) and Caroline Butcher. He was part of a family of highland landscape painters and his brothers Charles (1857-1923) and William Watson Jnr (1847-1921) were also artists. His father seems to have travelled around and after spending time in Brighton, the family moved to Bransford Road in Worcester during the early part of the 1860's. Watson and his brothers were taught art by their father who influenced their style and subject matter. In 1...
